Last Days of Blades

Come join a semester-length class this fall!

A hands-on approach to learning history, hagiography, and the heating and honing of metal creating a highly engaging, unforgettable experience!

In America, the sun set on edged weapons in combat in the continent's largest clash of arms – the Civil War.

Swords and such have since become more about ceremony than survival.

Yet back in the days when your life might swing on the strength of your steel, sword design was a vital craft.

That practicality came in a myriad of forms – whether your role was on horses, behind cannon, on fields, on ships, or even musical – the blades fit the battle zone!
